A shipment can be accepted for shipping in the following manner: in an Acceptance Point – the Sender itself provides the shipment; at the Sender – the Courier collects the shipment on the basis of a prior request. If the Sender and the Shipper are not the same person, the Sender will be considered to be acting on behalf of the Shipper.
2. DHL provides services on the basis of a shipping agreement or an agreement to provide postal services. If it does not follow from the order to perform a service, the consignment note or the DHL price list that an agreement to provide postal services has been concluded, this will mean that a shipping agreement has been concluded.

2. The Sender is obliged to pack the shipment adequately and deliver it to the Courier in a condition which enables it to be correctly shipped, without damaging other shipments in transit, and to be delivered without depletion or damage. In particular, the packaging should be properly sealed to make it impossible for unauthorised persons to access the content, should be adequately durable according to the weight and content of the shipment, should secure the content inside to prevent it from moving, and should bear markings to indicate any special character of a shipment, such as: "PLEASE NOTE: NON-STANDARD SHIPMENT" and "TOP" (this may be marked by the Courier or in the Acceptance Point).
3. DHL can refuse to accept items which are defective or inadequately packed or do not have the required packaging or if the packaging of the shipment or a visible part of its content contains notices, images, drawings or other graphic signs breaching the law, and also in other cases specified by applicable law. DHL will not be liable for damage due to an absence, insufficiency or defectiveness of packaging.
4. If the Sender uses cargo pallets owned by DHL to send shipments, which the Consignee refuses to return, the Sender will be charged the costs connected with this.
5. DHL can refuse to conclude or can rescind an agreement to provide a Postal Service particularly if:
 - 1) the requirements concerning the provision of postal services, specified in applicable law or in these General Terms and Conditions, are not met by the Sender;

 - 2) classify the goods for import, not to provide DHL with any Controlled Goods, and to notify DHL promptly in writing if the Sender becomes aware or has reasons to believe that a Parcel contains Controlled Goods;
 - 3) make sure that delivery to the destination and any known end user or end use case do not violate the applicable Export Control Laws, and to make sure that neither the Sender or a related party, nor the Addressee or any third party involved by the Sender, directly or indirectly, on the basis of a contract, are Excluded Parties.

Article 7

1. The Sender is obliged to place its address and the address of the Consignee on the packaging of the shipment, which must be consistent with the data in the consignment note. If possible, the shipment should contain other markings enabling it to be identified (e.g. a company's special tape).
2. The data of the Consignee/Sender should include the name and surname/proper name, name of street, number of house and apartment (if applicable), postcode, name of place; also recommended is a phone number to enable DHL to get in touch in order to perform the service properly.
3. In the event of the Shipper or Sender providing DHL with the phone number and/or e-mail address of the Consignee, the Consignee will be authorised to make representations via the "Parcel Redirect" service available at przekieruj.dhlparcel.pl, on the conditions set forth in the "General Terms and Conditions of Using the Parcel Redirect Service", regarding changes of the agreement conditions by: demanding that the shipment be released at a DHL ServicePoint, DHL Locker or an agency of DHL or providing another delivery address or a different date of delivery, or ordering the Delivery to Neighbour service or changing its content. The Consignee may also make a representation on refusing to accept the shipment. A change of agreement in the manner described above shall not require the presentation, by the Consignee, of a copy of the consignment note. Any and all actions performed via the "Parcel Redirect" service using the PIN code sent by DHL to the phone number and/or e-mail address provided shall be deemed as having been performed by the Consignee. The provisions of this section shall not apply to shipments with a weight exceeding 31.5 kg.

Article 8

1. DHL shall not accept shipments containing: cash, securities, other documents of a payment character; valuables (jewellery products, works of art, antiques, numismatics etc.); weapons and ammunition; pyrotechnic articles; articles which are easily spoiled, requiring special shipping conditions; chemically and biologically active goods; animals, human and animal remains; narcotics and psychotropic substances; medicines requiring special shipping conditions; other goods whose properties could pose a danger to people coming into contact with them, or which could damage or destroy other shipments; goods subject to the Act on the System of Monitoring Road Shipping of Goods of 9 March 2017; tobacco products subject to the Act on Protection of Health against the Consequences of the Consumption of Tobacco and Tobacco Products of 5 July 2018; other goods whose shipping is prohibited under applicable law. DHL does not accept shipments if this would break the law, particularly the Shipping Law and the Postal Law. DHL does not accept parcels containing military goods or other prohibited goods or goods requiring a licence, authorisation or permit (such as dual use goods or weapons) for import, export, transit or transfer in pursuance of the regulations on export controls and sanctions or other regulatory restrictions ("Controlled Goods") as well as parcels in respect of which the Sender, the Addressee or a third party with an interest in the Parcel, directly or indirectly involved in the shipment or transaction is a natural or legal person or an entity subject to sanctions imposed by the UN, EU, USA or, as the case may be, other governments and international organisations ("Excluded Party").
2. In the event of sending a shipment which DHL will not accept in accordance with Section 1, the Sender will be obliged to make good the resulting loss (particularly connected with contamination of the environment) in the full amount.

Article 9

1. A consignment note confirmed by DHL shall be proof of concluding an agreement to provide a Shipping Service or an agreement to provide a Postal Service; such proof can also be an electronic communication, computer print-out or another document containing the data specified in these General Terms and Conditions and legal regulations, applied by DHL. All items under a single consignment note will be regarded as a single shipment.
2. The declared value of a shipment must not exceed its ordinary value and should, at the request of DHL, be confirmed by appropriate documents (e.g. invoices, bills). If no value of the shipment is declared, it will be assumed that the declared value is PLN 500. In the case of a Postal Service, the declaration of the value of a shipment is made exclusively for the need to insure the shipment, and does not have an influence on the scope of liability of DHL consistent with Article 15.
3. The Sender issues the consignment note in accordance with the specimen note used by DHL. By issuing a consignment note, the Sender thereby confirms the consistency of the declared data concerning the shipment and the Sender's familiarity with these General Terms and Conditions, and also thereby gives its consent to the price of the service proposed by DHL.
4. By accepting a shipment, the Courier confirms – with his or her own signature placed on the consignment note – that the shipment has been accepted by DHL for shipping and delivery.

Article 10

1. According to the Shipper's instruction, the Sender, the Consignee or the Shipper (if not being either the Consignee or the Sender) pays for the services provided by DHL. This provision does not release the Sender or the Consignee from liability specified by applicable law.
2. If neither the Sender nor the Consignee is the Shipper, the order must necessarily be submitted in writing. The Shipper can only be the payer for a service if it has signed an agreement to provide services with DHL along with authorisation to pay by bank transfer.
3. In the situations referred to in Section 2 above, if the service of collection for a delivered shipment is additionally ordered, the collection amount will be paid into the Shipper's bank account stated in the agreement. The above cannot be changed by an instruction in the consignment note.
4. If DHL has accepted a shipment for transportation (including a Courier shipment) which is not paid for or paid for in an amount lower than that due, it can demand payment or additional payment from the Sender, the Consignee or the Shipper, in an amount in accordance with the applicable Price List or agreement.
5. If the Consignee pays the COD amount using a payment card and then they file a claim on the basis of the chargeback service offered by a payment institution or card company to enable the payer to obtain a refund, in particular for orders that have been performed improperly or have not been performed at all, DHL may refrain from transferring the COD amount in accordance with the Shipper's instruction until the chargeback procedure is completed. If such a claim is accepted, DHL has the right to give back the COD amount to the Consignee, and if it was transferred in accordance with the Shipper's instructions, DHL may demand its full refund.

Article 11

1. The content of a shipment may be checked by DHL at any time from the moment of its acceptance for transportation until the moment of its delivery to the Consignee, in order to confirm the consistency of its actual content with the data in the consignment note, unless otherwise stated in absolutely applicable law. DHL is not obliged to check the content of the shipment. This provision does not breach legal regulations providing for the possibility of opening a shipment for purposes other than that specified in the first sentence.

2. Checking is done in accordance with the Shipping Law or the Postal Law and executive regulations issued on their basis.
3. The inconsistencies referred to in par. 1 provide grounds for DHL to refuse to accept a shipment, and also to amend the general terms and conditions of the agreement.
4. Subject to Section 5, checking shipments for compliance with statements included in the consignment note and verifications whether the shipment contains a non-standard element may be performed by DHL employees at DHL locations without the Shipper. Findings of the check are entered into the DHL's information system and provide grounds for determining the correct rate of payment as well as for demanding payment for a non-standard element, in case of such element being found.
5. The rules for opening and checking shipments sent by Consumers or Entrepreneurs referred to in Article 385(5) of the Polish Civil Code and preserving the findings are specified in the provisions of the Shipping Law or the Postal Law.
